Lowe in Drawn Battle With Quaker City Boxer Before the Ardmore Club

Veteran Lifted Off His Feet by Wicked Left Hook in First Round, But Comes Back Strong-Thomas Outpoints Baltimore Antagonist.

By WILLIAM PEET.

Tommy Lowe, Washington's old ring master, who has been in the trenches or twelve years, fighting all-comers, earned a twenty-round draw against Willie Houck, of Philadelphia, before an enthusiastic Ardmore audience yester-

The first blow struck was a wicked left hook, which Houck started from somewhere near his knees and landing a glancing wallop on the side of Lowe's head, sent the veteran sprawling on his back. "The fight will never go the limit," shouted the ringside bugs, but the fans reckoned without Tomy Lowe, who, displaying wonderful recuperative powers, jumped to his feet in a jiffy and stalled along until the bell rang.

That one wallop delivered by Houck came very near ending hostilities. Had it landed flush on the point of Lowe's jaw Tommy would have been jostled

It is a matter of record that Lowe's first time any opponent has "clipped" years age.

Fighting Fierce Throughout.

There was a whole lot of fighting crowded into yesterday's twenty-round bout and also a couple of acts not advertised in the newspapers.

Houck proved the same demon as of yore for absorbing punishment, and had all the better of it when it came to clower range, but on the other hand Lowe kept poking away with that famous left jab and short right when the boys mixed things up toe to toe, so Referee O'Connor's verdict of a draw was about the only decision that could have been rendered.

In the eighth round, or, to be exact, during the three-minute recess preceding this chapter, Houck's seconds dabbed some collodion on a cut under the boxer's left eye, with the result that the fumes left eye of the local boy at a safe distance.

Houck Meets with Injury.

In the eighteenth round Houck dislocated one of the leaders of his left arm and during intermission a doctor was called to look at the injured member. Although the bell rang before a cursory examination could be made, and Refereo O'Connor asked Lowe to hold back a few minutes, the veteran refused and insisted that the fight either proceed or else that

Two of the largest heavy-weights who ever donned the padded mitts, will be seen in action on March 4 next, in Sales, New Orleans, when Champion Jess Willard defends his title for the first time since winning it from Jack Johnson in Havana, against Fred Fulton.

Both men are physical giants and both have reputations for clean and wholesome living. Fulton, although comparatively unknown, is said to be a skillful boxer as well as a heavy hitter, and while Willard may not be the most expert boxer in the world, he had enough strength and boxing ability to knock out the negro champion who held the title for years against all comers.
